

Student Success Centre programs to support start-ups and not-for-profits

Career Treks

Access free assistance with short-term projects. Through Career Treks, McMaster students support organizations with projects such as communications, marketing, beta testing, product development, social media strategies, data analysis, website redesign and more. To be eligible for this program, projects should not require a commitment of more than five hours a week over a four-month period (no more than 85 hours total per project).

Submit your project to Career Treks.

Innovation and idea crowdsourcing

If you have a challenge or problem you need to be solved, partner with McMaster to access viable, creative solutions from eager students. Use the free online platform to post your challenge, request submissions from students and rate the responses. Through this program, you'll gain access to new ideas and fresh perspectives.

Have questions?

Contact Anna Magnotta, manager of employment and experiential learning, at nealean@mcmaster.ca.

